Business In Review Set For April 19

Approximately One Hundred Employers Will Be On Hand

Clayton State students will have a special opportunity on April 19, 1990. Representatives from 104 companies and information about 15 other organizations will be available that Thursday, from 9:00 a.m. until noon in the gymnasium, at the third annual "Business in Review."

"Business in Review '90" is a career exchange (a kind of fair), where students have the opportunity to interact with business leaders and find out the types of jobs that are available and that relate to their majors. The purpose of this fair is to assist all students with making their job choice and with initiating those first contacts with employers. "Business in Review '90" is not an interview situation -- companies will not be hiring on the spot! Some informal recruiting, however, may occur. The fair will provide an open door into the world of business.

Students will have the opportunity to discuss company trends and investigate their career options. Students will have the opportunity to make connections with representatives from local and national companies, that they can later follow up when the time approaches for finding a job. Businesses represented at the fair will also provide information about co-op educational and internship possibilities for the immediate future -- e.g., this summer or next fall.

The businesses participating in "Business in Review '90" will be arranged in alphabetical order in the gymnasium. A program will be given to each student, so that particular businesses can be located easily. Ms. Peggy Gardner, Director of Placement at CSC, suggests that students research the companies in which they are interested prior to the fair.

In this way, students will know before hand to whom they want to talk and students can save time, as the fair is a once-a-year event. The Placement Office in D-208 can provide resources and information about the companies. Also, students are advised to check periodicals in the library, such as the Atlanta Business Chronicle, for information about the companies.

Students will want to "dress for success" by wearing conservative attire such as suits. Also, students will want to prepare a few questions to discuss with company representatives (see "Sample Questions" Article).

Full Schedule of Programs Offered By Lyceum

by Joe L. Digby
Staff Writer

This Spring, Clayton State College's Lyceum program continues to bring to our College some of the most sought after speakers and performers. The program continues to grow year after year with a wide variety of programs. This quarter's performances are no exception.

On April 11 and 12, Dr. William Leuchtenburg will speak on "F.D.R. and the New Deal." Dr. Leuchtenburg is the author of In the Shadow of F.D.R., From Harry Truman to Ronald Reagan, and Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal.

He has also written or co-written nine other books. As a frequent guest lecturer, he has spoken at dozens of American universities. Dr. Leuchtenburg has also spoken at the Universities of Edinburgh and Glasgow, the Free University of Berlin, and Hebrew University in Jerusalem. He will be speaking on April 11, at 7:00 p.m. and at 11:05 a.m. on April 12. Both lectures will be held in D-223.

CSC Student Leaves This Weekend For Soviet Union

by Jason T. Black
Staff Writer

On April 14, CSC student Wendy Barlow will be one of the elite few in the Friendship Force to venture to the Soviet Union. The Friendship Force is an organization that was initiated when former President Jimmy Carter was in office. "Basically," says Wendy, "we go to other countries that are at odds with us, and we try to better our relations, or simply make friends."

Wendy has always traveled. She was in Germany when the wall came down, and helped during the Hungarian crisis. The Friendship Force really piqued her interest, so she went down and scheduled an interview.

She had to attend four days of interviewing. The people interviewed were all divided into various categories, and they chose the people to go from these categories.

The group will, ironically enough, be going to Soviet Georgia. Wendy joked, See U.S.S.R. (page 6)

Racism: The AIDS Of The 1990's?

by Jason T. Black
Staff Writer

Will racism become the AIDS of this decade? Will it become a rallying point for the media to discuss in a variety of public forums? I don't know, but it is a problem that is eating at the very heart of America.

"The simple solution is that everybody act human whatever their skin color. I don't have a problem with white people per se. I do have a problem with white people acting Caucasian." So quotes the ever lovable, outspoken, arrogant Chuck D of Public Enemy fame. The quote comes from a recent issue of Spin magazine, a monthly music publication.

Now, I listen to the music of Public Enemy, and I do find some of the things that they preach in their songs admirable. They don't advocate the use of drugs, and they shun those that do. They belittle the government's policies on crimes, and urge for stricter laws and more stringent enforcement of them. I applaud the groups efforts in trying to make a difference in the world, but as much as they help it, they destroy it.

Many of Chuck D's lyrics call for the blacks to resist the white's rules. Rules of this nation. Rules to be obeyed by all, regardless of skin color.

Public Enemy's message of this kind of insurrection is completely unfounded, if not totally ridiculous. Much movement is being made, and progress is achieved everyday in improving the relationships between blacks and whites. The bottom line is that it is going to take time to employ all of the changes that must be made in this country, and violence is not the solution to the problem.

This summer, Spike Lee released a film called Do The Right Thing. The film showed the racial tensions in Brooklyn escalate to the point where a full scale riot broke out. Public Enemy fueled the film with the biting song "Fight the Power." This song glorified violent resistance, and seemed to cheer the angry black mob into doing what they did. The film ended with a quote from Malcolm X, which basically said that he didn't call it stupid to resist those that oppressed you, he called it intelligence.

Public Enemy seems to also believe that, and they model many of their songs about the black man overcoming the white man. The white man is no longer the enemy to the black, and the black is no longer the enemy to the white. The real enemy now is radical organizations like the Ku Klux Klan, who express a real extremist view.

On one side of the spectrum there are black extremists and on the other side are white extremists, and in the middle is a melange of integrated, socially adapted blacks and whites. It is the people in the middle that are the real victims. They are the ones who have to constantly take sides with one extremist group or another, just to protect themselves.

The extremists are causing more harm than good. They harm the people they claim to represent, and they further anger those that they oppose. The extremists must realize the damage that they are causing before a situation like that in Do The Right Thing erupts.

I hope to see a pitfall for the Ku Klux Klan, and to see better relations between the two races. Also, I hope that Chuck D will redirect his energies into writing and producing songs that will reflect a positive image for the youth of today. Perhaps one day Martin Luther King's dreams will come true, but not until a step is taken by both races in the positive direction.

Who Says You Can't Change The World?

by Sonya Hinson
Student Freelance Submission

"Who says you can't change the world" is the question asked by members of the Earth Day 1990 committees. The question is directed at each Georgian who lives, eats and breathes. These people have diligently organized activities, gathered information and lobbied for support in order for this event not to go unnoticed. It is their intent to create an awareness among each and every one of us in the hopes that we will stop and take a look at what on earth is happening and to decide to change our ways.

There are many activities planned for April 22, 1990, as well as subsequent weeks before. Please refer to the information below to find events that might be of interest to you.

This important celebration should not stop after Sunday, April 22 -- let's use Earth Day as the day we begin individually giving back to the Earth what it has given to us for so long ... life!

New Business School Student Group Provides For Student Involvement

by Sonya Hinson
Student Freelance Submission

Clayton State College is quickly becoming an established four-year academic institution. The School of Business, in particular, is a growing branch of the College with the addition of new faculty, programs and professional organizations like American Production and Inventory Control Society (APICS) and Society of Human Resource Management.

Specifically, the CSC chapter of the Society of Human Resource Management (SHRM) is an association of students who are interested in the field of Human Resource Management.

SHRM's purpose is to create an awareness among students about the functions and importance of human resource management. We also intend to provide the forum in which students may meet and network with professionals in the human resource and business fields.

SHRM has meetings on scheduled days once a month. We have conducted resume and interview techniques workshops in the past two quarters. This quarter's first meeting is Thursday, April 12, 1990, at 11:05 a.m. in T-212. Speaking will be Mr. John Forrester, who is the owner of Financial Alternatives, Inc. He is going to introduce students to the trends in benefits that will occur in the nineties.

This forum-type lecture is one that should be of interest to all who plan on working or who already work. We encourage those interested to join us on April 12.

As well as providing meetings at school, SHRM members also attend the meetings of the professional chapter of SHRM. The Tara Chapter of SHRM is made up of local human resource professionals who look forward to the chance to meet career oriented college students.

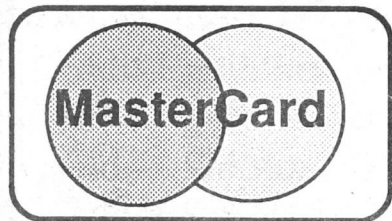

If you are interested in the activities SHRM is involved in and would like to receive more information, contact Sonya Hinson or Galen Tingle through the Student Services office, C-57.

SGA Candidates Share Backgrounds And Aspirations

Jennifer Myers-Candidate For SGA President

Hi! I'm Jennifer Myers and I'm running for the office of Student Government Association (SGA) President. Since starting at Clayton State College, I have been involved in various groups and activities. Some of these groups include SGA, Intramural Volleyball, Athletic Committee and the CSC Theatre. I really enjoy Clayton State College. I feel Clayton has much to offer students including high academic standards and a growing campus life. I feel student life is almost as important as academics in helping us grow as individuals.

As SGA President I will bring the SGA to its full potential, making it the best it can be: "Representatives of the students, FOR the students." I feel I am qualified for this office because of my experience, determination and knowledge of the College.

In the Fall I was elected Representative At-Large and during the Winter quarter was elected to the office of Secretary. As your SGA Secretary, I observed first hand the policies and procedures, as well as the amount of hard work and commitment it takes to an effective President. In addition to SGA activities, I am a member of the Student Affairs Committee, General Entertainment Committee, and Council of Clubs. I am also a member of the Student Advisory Council (SAC), which deals with state-wide student concerns. My involvement in these groups has given me the leadership abilities and determination to be SGA President.

I feel as a college, we can grow and I will devote my time and energy to make Clayton State College the best it

Terri Sanders-Candidate For SGA Secretary

Hello? My name is Terri Sanders and I want to be your next SGA secretary. My experience for the position includes being my high school Student Government Secretary for two years. I was secretary for my Sunday School class and President of my theater group. I won the United States Achievement Academy's Leadership and Service Award (among others).

I am majoring in music and am extremely excited about Spivey Hall and the possibility of the four-year music program. As your secretary, I want to help project this excitement to the community and promote Clayton State College as one of the finest academic institutions in the state.

I am also committed to conveying the wants and needs of you, the students, to the administration and seeing them accomplished. I will support the other student officers, and together, we will help CSC grow to its full potential. With my past experience and enthusiasm for the future of CSC, I'm sure together can be. As your student leader, I will represent You, the student.

As your SGA President, I promise to commit myself to do my best. Clayton depends on us in order to function, and we depend on Clayton to help us grow. As President, I want to separate Lyceum from activities hour. I want to improve our student and study lounges to make school and studying more pleasurable (if it is possible to make studying pleasurable).

I would like to add vending machines to other buildings, for convenience, and provide picnic tables out by the lake, so we can enjoy the beauty of campus. I intend to have more student activities and functions, for example: Casino Night. I promise to give students an effective chance to voice concerns, wants, and needs.

As your President, I will try to change the attitude of Clayton into a 100% positive one, because Clayton can be #1, and with me as your Representative leader, Clayton will be #1. Vote MYERS for President next week.

we'll make a great team!

I look forward to seeing you on election day!

SGA Executive

Anthony Salandy-Candidate For SGA President

I was born in Trinidad, West Indies. Having served five years in the military, I was honorably discharged in 1988 and chose Atlanta to be my home. In the fall of 1989 I enrolled at Clayton State College (CSC) as a nursing major.

I am currently Treasurer of the Black Cultural Awareness Association (BCAA). As treasurer of the BCAA, I helped formulate the "Feed the Hungry" program, the "Toys for Tots" program and the "Drug Awareness" program.

My first priority would be to communicate with all CSC students. I will have to make sure that each and every student, day and night, are aware of all the policies, good or questionable, that are facing them at this institution. I will continue to work towards an increase in student involvement in organizations and clubs at CSC. It is very apparent on our fine campus that we have a very diverse cultural student body. If there is a need for an education of these different cultures, then these needs will have to be addressed. We can accomplish this by staging more multi-cultural events.

I will also address the issue of formulating more Baccalaureate Programs.

A study should be done by SGA and the administration on a program of study each would like to see available at CSC. Keeping in par with excellence, the orientation program needs to be studied. An intensive orientation program may be warranted. I have started talks with the administration about having social sororities and fraternities on campus. This spring quarter may see the first social fraternity on campus.

I will be proud to be your SGA president. I must stress to you, my fellow students, to vote in this upcoming SGA elections. Be a part of the school spirit. Thank You...

FAA Co-op Prepares Students For Future Jobs

Four CSC Students Currently Participate In Air Traffic Control Program

Four students from Clayton State are learning to solve Air Traffic Control problems through a joint venture between the school and the Federal Aviation Administration known as a cooperative education program, co-op for short. The students currently participating in this cooperative education program are Ivan Harstvedt, Patrick Kee, Rodney Peek, and David Prowant. These students spend two to three work sessions at the Atlanta Air Traffic Control Center in Hampton, Georgia, earning money and studying aviation and air traffic control. When they receive their baccalaureate degree from Clayton and complete their co-op sessions they shall be sent to Oklahoma City where the Federal Aviation Administration trains all of their air traffic controllers. The school at Oklahoma City consists of 12 weeks of intense and rigorous programming in which graduates of co-op programs go into with an advantage in knowledge and skills.

To get the most out of the fair, students should bring a small notebook so that they can write down contact names from the companies represented. Students don't necessarily need to bring a resume, but for students close to graduation or contemplating an internship in the near future, it won't hurt to ask if they may contact the company. Students may also consider having a "calling card" made to distribute at the fair. The calling card would have the student's name, address and phone number printed on it. However, it is mainly up to the student to follow up contacts made at the fair. Interviews can be set up at a later date through the Placement Office, as many companies come to campus during the academic year.

"Business in Review '90" is mainly a networking event for the students. It provides practice in effective communication with employers, as students will be visiting the various representatives at the fair and asking them questions in a one-on-one or small group situation. It also provides an excellent opportunity to see the wide range of jobs offered in the local community or with companies that have branches throughout the United States.

Students may also get credit in some classes by attending the event. Sign-up sheets will be available, listed by school (e.g., School of Business, School of Technology). To get credit, be sure to sign in.

For more information, call 961-3515.

Sample Questions For Business In Review

So, you've decided to attend "Business in Review '90" on April 19. Now what? What questions to ask of the company representatives? How can you find out about jobs related to your major? Or, if you haven't decided upon a major but have several ideas in mind, how can you find out which careers offer greater opportunities?

Here are some sample questions to use at "Business in Review '90."

- 1) Does your company employ _____ (particular career, e.g., auditors)?
- 2) I am interested in getting into the field of _____ (name of a career field) and am wondering what qualifications you look for in hiring people in that field.
- 3) Do you anticipate much demand in your organization for people in _____ (name of career field) in _____ (number) of years?
- 4) What is the range of salaries being offered to entry level people in _____ field at your company?
- 5) Does your organization ever hire students in co-op positions in the field of _____? If so, how do I go about applying for this? What experience, courses, grades, and other training would help me become more competitive for these positions?
- 6) Do you have any positions for which a liberal arts degree would be beneficial?
- 7) In your opinion, what makes one qualified applicant stand out from others?
- 8) What are your company's most sought after skills?
- 9) Do you anticipate openings in the Atlanta area or where might your openings be?

"We all have these T-shirts that say 'Georgians of the World, Unite!'" She is very optimistic about the whole trip, and feels that nothing but the best will happen.

Wendy will be staying in the countryside with a family that she still hasn't been informed about. She will travel with the various members of the family and learn their daily routine. She said, "If the family has a student, then I will go to school or to the university with him. Did you know that Soviet Georgia has over 20 universities?"

Wendy says excitedly, "It would make my trip complete if Gorbachev would just speak to us for a little bit. He's a busy man, so I doubt he will, but it would be real exciting." The group will go to Moscow for one day, and of course go to the new McDonald's. Wendy ponders, "I wonder if their cheeseburgers taste like ours? I know in France they didn't."

The Soviets will also be sending nearly three hundred students to America in the exchange. Wendy's parents will be the host to one of the correspondents, and she assures that her parents have a lot planned for him.

Wendy will be gone for two weeks and will return on April 30. She would like to extend her thanks to her teachers for working with her. She says, "They are giving me the assignments ahead of time, and I'll take my books on the plane. That's when I'll study, on the plane." She laughed, but insisted that she had to study.

Wendy has agreed to write an article about her Friendship Force trip. Look for it in a May issue of The Bent Tree.

Steel Magnolias At Clayton Next Friday

by Jason T. Black
Staff Writer

Starring Julia Roberts, Sally Field, Olympia Dukakis, Dolly Parton, Shirley MacLaine, and Darryl Hannah
Written by Robert Harling
Directed by Herbert Ross

One of last year's biggest movies, Steel Magnolias, will be appearing on campus on April 20. The shows will begin at 1:15, 6:30, 8:35, and 10:30 p.m. The movie focuses on a rural town where everyone pretty much knows each other.

Four of the women (Olympia Dukakis, Sally Field, Shirley MacLaine, and Dolly Parton) have grown up together, and dealt with each others problems for so long, that they can't remember a time when anything was different. Field's daughter in the film (Julia Roberts) is going to marry her boyfriend of a couple of years (played remarkably well by Dylan McDermott). Robert's character is planning to have an incredible wedding, full of nothing but pink, even the seat covers.

The mother and daughter have a confrontation at the beauty parlor concerning the wedding, and Robert's goes into a diabetic fit. Her mother calms her, and the two drop the argument.

After the wedding is over, and time has passed, Robert's announces to everyone that she is planning to have a baby. Field is upset by this, and reminds her that as a diabetic, she shouldn't have children because it could kill her. They have another fight and Robert's ends up walking out on her mother.

Ms. Roberts goes ahead with her plan and has her baby. The baby is healthy, and Robert's appears to escape the pregnancy with no harm. Slowly though, her body begins to react adversely to the pregnancy. Robert arms begin to dry up, as if she's being eaten from the inside out.

They rush her to the hospital and the whole hometown rallies behind her. They wait, praying for her recovery.

The entire story builds on the relationship and the intricacies involved with any close friendships. Robert's illness binds the women together, and makes them realize how important that they really are to each other.

Robert Harling's script had several holes, and he never did really develop the characters as well as he could have. The story was moved along by the actors.

The actors in this film (eight major ones anyway) proved the point that acting does make the film. Sally Field and Julia Roberts supplied the film with most of its energy, and had the burden of carrying the film through some of the weaker parts of the script.

Steel Magnolias had several good things to offer. The film used powerful images that drew the viewer back to his childhood, and the importance that was placed on friends. Steel Magnolias makes one realize how important it is to have someone to count on, and to feel comfortable around. Most of all, the film makes friends with its audience, makes you care, and isn't that what going to the movies is all about?

Pretty Woman Is All Smiles At The Movies

by Jason T. Black
Staff Writer

Starring Richard Gere, Julia Roberts, and Laura San Giacomo
Written by J.F. Lawton
Directed by Garry Marshall

I'm sure that many people are familiar with the story of Pygmalion, where the poor girl is taken in to wealth. In Pretty Woman, a modern day Pygmalion has been created. Vivian (the sensational Julia Roberts) is a prostitute who is down on her luck. She doesn't have enough money for rent, and her roommate (Laura San Giacomo of sex, lies, and videotape) has squandered their meager savings on drugs.

Enter Edward (Richard Gere), a successful multi-millionaire who happens to be a very eligible bachelor. He gets lost in Los Angeles, and stops to ask for directions. Ms. Roberts obliges, and together they head out.

Ms. Roberts literally charms the pants off of him, and after a night in his penthouse hotel room, he hires her to be his date for a week. She is elated, and agrees to do it for the sum of $3000, which she pays her rent with.

As cheap as this movie must sound, it isn't. The story isn't just sex, sex, sex. Instead, it is an interesting character study of Vivian and Edward and the relationship that builds between them.

Edward and Vivian both are hesitant to admit that there is any feeling between them, but after a trip to the opera, they both realize the inevitable. Edward has reservations about marrying her because of his past failed relationships, but is drawn to her for some reason that he can not place.

He hurts her and she leaves at the end of the week. She retreats to her apartment and is determined to never work as a prostitute again. She packs her bags and is heading away when Edward returns to her life. A fairy tale ending ensues, and I guess all is well.

The performances were all good, with the exception being Ms. Roberts. She handled her role with precision, and totally overwhelmed the audience everytime she appeared on the screen.

The story was decent, but the performances carried the script for the most part. Ms. Roberts is proving her acting range, and awards are going to start pouring her way very soon. Mr. Gere is on a comeback, sort of. This is definitely better than his three pictures before this, including Internal Affairs, but his screen presence is still hard to take seriously.

Pretty Woman offers a refreshing change at the movies. It doesn't carry on with all of the stereotypes that seem to populate and belittle these types of movies. The film found a place in my heart, and I'm sure it will find one in yours, too.

Carlos Head Signed As CSC's Newest Basketball Player

Morrow Senior High School basketball star, 6-1 guard Carlos Head, has signed a basketball grant-in-aid with Clayton State College, according to Mason Barfield, athletic director and head basketball coach.

Named to several post-season honor teams, Head was a leader on this year's Morrow Mustang team that finished the year with a 16-11 record. Performing at the guard position for Morrow Coach Richard Simmons, he was the team's leading rebounder, free throw shooter and second leading scorer.

Carlos pulled down almost 8 rebounds per game and set a school record by chasing in 85.5 percent of his free throws. His 18.2 scoring average was second only to the 18.4 average posted by teammate Maurice Jackson. During his senior year, Head hit 45 percent of his two-point efforts and almost 42 percent of his three-point goals.

"He's a very talented offensive player and will develop into a very good college player," Coach Barfield said of his latest recruit. "His attitude toward playing is what I really like about him...he enjoys playing and enjoys himself while playing. I think that's important."

Head's family moved from southwest Atlanta to Morrow before his junior year in high school, and he was a starter for the Mustangs by mid-season last year.

Head is the third outstanding athlete signed to play on Clayton State's first basketball team next year. Adrian Stephens, a six-foot standout guard at North Clayton Senior High School a year ago, signed in January, and Matt Bowen, a 5-11 point guard out of Calhoun High School, signed in April.

Clayton State College will enter into athletics slowly, starting with a men's basketball team during the 1990-91 season, and adding other programs each year. Clayton will be a member of NAIA District 25, playing in a conference with 11 other Georgia colleges.

Players Signed From Jackson And Duluth High Schools

Two more basketball players have signed grant-in-aids to play at Clayton State College, according to Mason Barfield, head coach and director of athletics.

Signed last week were Vince Askin, a 6-7 forward/center from Jackson High School; and Steve Wilson, a 6-8 forward/center from Duluth High School.

Coach Barfield now has five players who have agreed to play on the College's first basketball team next fall. Earlier signees were 6-0 guard Adrian Stevens of North Clayton Senior High, 5-11 guard Matt Bowen of Calhoun High, and 6-1 guard/forward Carlos Head of Morrow Senior High.

Askin, who likely will play both forward and center for Clayton State, was a starter during the last two seasons for Jackson High. During his senior year, he led the team in blocked shots with 85, a 3.1 average, and was the second-leading rebounder with a 6.4 average.

Jackson High posted a 22-5 record last year and was 18-6 the previous season, giving the Butts County team a 40-11 two-year record with Askin as a starter.

Wilson played the center position for a Duluth team that went 15-8 this past season. A strong offensive and defensive performer, he average 10 points per game, pulled down 7 rebounds and blocked an average of 4 shots per contest.
