Employers and Students Set For "Business In Review '92"

Clayton State students will have a special opportunity on April 23, 1992. Representatives from 100 area businesses, government agencies and educational institutions will be available on that date from 9:00 a.m. until noon in the gymnasium for the fifth annual Business In Review. Students in all majors will find information of interest from both the public and private sectors, including manufacturing, banking and finance, health care, aviation, retailing, government agencies and graduate degree programs.

"Business In Review '92" is a special event presented annually to provide CSC students the opportunity to interact with business leaders, and explore the types of career opportunities which relate to students' major interests. The purpose of this event is to assist students with making career choices as well as initiating first contacts with regional employers.

"Business In Review '92" is not intended to be a formal interview situation - companies and agencies will not be making job offers on the spot! Some informal recruiting for positions may take place, however, the primary focus of the program is to afford students the opportunity of opening that first door into the world of work.

Students will have the opportunity of discussing company employment trends and investigate career options. They will also have the opportunity of making connections with representatives from regional and national companies, which can later be pursued when the time approaches for finding a position.

Student Government Seeks Candidates For Executive Positions

by Cindy Jones
SGA President

CSC's SGA has been very busy this past year. A few of the newest major projects include sponsorship and coordination of the 2nd annual Volunteer Fair, the adoption of the YWCA Transitional House for displaced women and children, and the exploration of creating a bona fide student center. You can become a part of these projects as well as those in the coming year by running for an office in the executive elections in April. Petitions and election regulations can be picked up in the Student Activities Office (D-217). The petition must be turned in by Tuesday, April 14, 1992, along with a personal profile of 200 words or less and a photo to be printed in The Bent Tree.

I feel that it is very important to become involved and to show support in your school. Not only is a feeling of accomplishment attained but also a sense of belonging. The contact with the community and administrators also provides a network that can be drawn from in the search for a job.

If you do not wish to run for an executive position, you can still help. (See SGA Election on page 6)

VIEWPOINT

A Student's View Republicans Have Led America In Wrong Direction

by Tommy Phillips
Student Freelance Submission

After twelve years of Republican "leadership," it's time for the people of this nation to come to their senses and realize that they have been duped. First, there was Ronald Reagan who encouraged us to sell our souls to the false gods of avarice and materialism. While Ronnie made us feel good, he never mentioned anything about having to pay the piper. We liked the Great Communicator so much that we put him in office a second time. After Reagan left office, we were so enthused with the, "What, me worry?" approach of the Republicans that we elected, as our nation's new "leader," George Herbert Walker Bush with his patrician attitudes and mannerisms. While the esteemed Mr. Bush demonstrated that he knew how to command the popularity polls (see Persian Gulf War), it became more and more obvious over time that he knew little about running a country.

Why, you may ask, are the Republicans so inept when it comes to national leadership? Maybe it has something to do with their close-minded, elitist, "there is no monster under the bed" ideals. I really don't know why Republicans are the way they are, but I do know that our nation is bleeding as a result of the things that the Republicans have done. Bleeding? How so? Well, let me explain.

First of all, there's our national economy, which is in shambles. What the Republicans promised would be a new era of American prosperity has turned into the mother of all nightmares. While I am quite willing to give Congress some credit for our economic woes, the lion's share of the blame has to go to Messrs. Reagan and Bush for their efforts to further concentrate the wealth of this country in the hands of a few. The actions of Reagan and Bush are typical of the Republicans alliance with the financial elite of the United States. Next, we move on to crime. Rather than focusing on the socioeconomic factors which underlie the massive crime problem in this country, the Republicans tend to support band-aid measures such as more prisons, more cops, stiffer prison sentences, etc. On a similar note, the anti-drug measure taken by Reagan, Bush, and the rest of the Republicans have proven ineffective because those individuals refuse to accept the fact that the drug problem is just a surface indication of deeper problems.

Moving right along, we come to race relations. Let's face it, the Republicans have absolutely no desire to improve relations between the races. Interracial cooperation would mean that they would have to share their wealth and power. To match their dismal civil rights record, the Republican Party's officeholders have an increasingly bad civil liberties record, and the Supreme Court, which is stacked with conservatives, is fast chipping away at our rights/privileges/liberties. The most notable of these attached have come against the Fourth Amendment. Lastly, I'll mention education and the environment. The state of education has declined over the past twelve years as Republicans are inclined to favor education for the few. And environment speaking, Republicans seem to favor sacrificing the delicate balance of nature for a quick profit. George Bush calling himself the Environmental President is like Attila the Hun referring to himself as a people person.

Thus ends this scathing attack on Reagan, Bush, Republicans, and conservative people in general. If I have written in very general terms, it has been due to space limitations, and I apologize. And at this point, I would like to urge all of you to support your favorite candidates during this election year. Don't neglect your right to vote!

Lecture Review

Atlanta's Top Cop Speaks Out On Crime In America

by Emmanuel Wahiwe
Staff Writer

Atlanta Police Chief Eldrin Bell was brutally honest with the CSC students in explaining the issue of crime in America. With 30 years experience in law enforcement, Chief Bell was, on August 20, 1990, appointed the 20th Chief of Police in the history of the city of Atlanta.

In a lecture that attracted over 80 participants, Chief Bell explained that crime in America is one of the most misunderstood problems of the present age. The primary causes of crime in society, according to Chief Bell, include broken homes, migration of people into the cities, and the absence of an adult in a child's life. And as a result of competing philosophies, institutions are failing in their duties to impart accurate knowledge to the general public. "Until we retool America," he said, "American economy will not improve." He feels that it does not really make much difference cutting off the sources of drugs from other countries since, according to him, "America still sees the need to get high."

Chief Bell informed the audience that about 15,628 young Americans, primarily males between the ages of 18 and 22, are being killed on our streets yearly over the issue of capitalistic and economic positioning of themselves in crime. Also 83 percent of those who are arrested each year and about 95 percent of the prostitutes arrested in Atlanta, are on drugs. An estimated 39 percent of young Georgians do not graduate from high school each year.

Although the rate of crime in Georgia has gone down by about 20 percent during the last two years, the Atlanta Police Chief stressed that encouraging education as a priority plays a major role in curbing crime. He urged the students in the audience and the general public to join in the fight to stop crime of all kinds in our society.

Juilliard String Quartet Makes Spivey Hall Debut on April 10

The world famous Juilliard String Quartet performs at Spivey Hall on Friday, April 10. The concert is set for 8:15 p.m. Ticket prices are $15.00 for adults and $5.00 for students/senior citizens. CSC students can claim up to two free tickets, if available, by calling th Spivey Hall ticket office at 961-3683.

The 1991-92 season marks the 45th anniversary of the founding of the renowned Quartet, which has been in existence longer than any chamber music ensemble now performing and has given more concerts for more people in more cities of more countries and made more recordings than any other in history. Founded in 1946 by William Schuman, then president of The Juilliard School, the Quartet is now composed of Robert Mann, violin, who is the last remaining founding member; Joel Smirnoff, second violin; Samuel Rhodes, viola; and Joel Krosnick, cello.

The Quartet is quartet-in-residence at Juilliard, the Library of Congress and Michigan State University. Although the Quartet is usually identified as specializing in 20th-century music, it has come to devote an equal amount of time to the standard repertory, notable the Beethoven quartets, of which it has presented numerous complete cycles and which it has recorded for Columbia.

In the current season, the Juilliard String Quartet will present, among other programs, two all-Mozart concerts at Lincoln Center, its unique version of the complete Bach "Art of the Fugue" and all four of the monumental quartets of Elliott Carter.

All four players in the Quartet have great technical skill, but its style derives from its "aggressive, impetuous" playing. Of a recent all-Schubert concert presented by these players, the music reviewer for New York magazine had this to say: "Each note was communicated with the special brand of intellectual animation and intensity of expression that has long made the Juilliard our premiere string quartet."

CSC Faculty Member Presents Viola Concert

On Thursday, April 9, Clayton State's Lyceum will present Mrs. Doris Holloway in a free, non-ticketed viola recital in G-132. The recital was previously scheduled to take place in Spivey Hall.

Ms. Holloway is Professor of Music and the coordinator of Fine Arts at CSC. She is also a member of the Atlanta String Quartet and serves as organist at Mary Branan United Methodist Church. Ms. Holloway is a former member of the Atlanta and San Diego Symphony Orchestras and the Emory String Quartet. She received her B.F.A. from the University of Georgia and her M.M. from the University of Illinois.

In addition to teaching classes and giving private lessons, Ms. Holloway accompanies many of the faculty and student performances on campus. She has been a member of the orchestra for numerous Clayton State Music Theatre Ensemble presentations over the years.

Shape Up For The American Lung Association Of Georgia's "Clean Air Challenge"

by Jason Bailey
Environmental Awareness Club

It's getting warmer and the days are getting longer. Everyone's looking for fun and exciting things to do to usher in Spring and Summer. Why not meet the American Lung Association's "Clean Air Challenge"?

The "Clean Air Challenge is an annual event that provides an exciting and unique experience for the veteran and beginning cycling enthusiast alike. The two-day trek is a chance for cyclists to discover the back roads of Georgia while raising money to meet the challenge of wiping out lung disease. Through the support of trekkers and their sponsors, the American Lung Association of Georgia (ALAG) hopes to raise much needed funds for its continuing effort to support clean air for the people of Georgia. This event will take place May 2-3, 1992. It kicks off Clean Air Week, the American Lung Association of Georgia's week-long challenge to Georgians to cease all air-polluting activities. Clean Air Week ends with Clean Commute Day, ALAG's invitation to Georgians to devise alternate forms of transportation to and from school and work.

The Clean Air Challenge is sponsored on campus by EarthFriends. EarthFriends and the ALAG ask for your support in the effort for cleaner air. If you would like further information, wish to be a trekker, or just want to be a sponsor, come by the informational table which will be set up by EarthFriends on April 9, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in C-Lobby. If you can't stop by then, please leave a message for Jason Bailey, the Southside "Clean Air Challenge" Coordinator, in the Office of Student Services (D-217).

Violinist Shahan Set For Spivey On April 4

On April 4, Clayton State will present Mr. Gil Shahan in a violin recital. The recital will begin at 8:15 PM and will take place at Spivey Hall. Tickets are priced at $15.00 for adults and $5.00 for students and senior citizens. CSC students can claim up to two free tickets, if available, by calling th Spivey Hall ticket office at 961-3683.

Mr. Shahan, just 21 years old, is already recognized by both critics and many of the world's most celebrated conductors and orchestras as a virtuoso performer. Since his debut in 1981 as a 10-year-old prodigy with the Jerusalem Symphony, Mr. Shahan has performed with the Berlin Philharmonic, the Cleveland Orchestra, the New York Philharmonic, La Scala Philharmonic, and the Boston Pops. His most famous appearances were those with the London Symphony Orchestra in May of 1989 when, on 24-hour notice, he stepped in for an ailing Itzhak Perlman. Currently a student at Columbia University and The Juilliard School,

Mr. Shahan has received publicity from a variety of sources. He has appeared on "Good Morning America" and has been featured on "Nova" in the documentary entitled "Child's Play: Prodigies and Possibilities." He was also named "Person of the Week" by ABC News. Anne Rey of Le Monde, in her review of his appearance with the Orchestre de Paris, wrote that "hearing Shahan, one is taken back to the past, to Heifetz and Francescatti. Immediately one understands why the violin can let loose in the concert hall a delirium of joy...Gil Shahan has the charisma of a great artist."

Pulitzer Winner Speaks On How The U.S. Press Covers World Events

On April 15-16 Lyceum will present Mr. Jim Hoagland in two presentations entitled "The U.S. Press and the Coverage of World Events" This Lyceum Laureate speaker will make his first presentation on Wednesday, April 16 at 7:00 p.m. He will repeat his presentation for day students at 12:05 p.m. on Thursday, April 16. Both presentations will take place in room G-132

Mr. Hoagland is an Associate Editor and Senior Foreign Correspondent of The Washington Post, which he has written for in a variety of positions since 1966. Mr. Hoagland was awarded a 1991 Pulitzer Prize (his second) for Commentary for his series of columns on Operation Desert Storm and the political problems of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. He received his first Pulitzer Prize in 1971 for International Reporting.

Mr. Hoagland received his A.B. in journalism in 1961 from the University of South Carolina. He then went to Europe, where he lived in France as a graduate student, then in Germany as an officer in the United States Air Force, and then again in France as copy editor for the international edition of The New York Times. Mr. Hoagland joined The Washington Post in 1966. He studied international politics and economics during a year as a Ford Foundation Fellow at Columbia University's School of International Affairs.

In 1969, Mr. Hoagland was assigned to Nairobi as the Post's Africa correspondent. For nearly two years, he concentrated on the racial conflicts of southern Africa, covering the Portuguese colonial wars in Angola, Mozambique and Guinea, the revolution in what was then Rhodesia and apartheid in South Africa.

He was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for International Reporting in 1971 for a ten-part series on apartheid. The series was also the nucleus of a book, South Africa: Civilizations in Conflict. His 1976 series on the gathering black revolt in South Africa won the Overseas Press Club award for foreign coverage that year. It also led to his second denunciation and visa refusal from the South African government.

Mr. Hoagland went to Beirut as Middle East correspondent in 1972, covering the Arab world, Israel and Iran. Four years later, he moved to Paris to cover France, Italy and Spain. In 1978, he became diplomatic correspondent on the Post's national staff in Washington; in 1981, he was named Assistant Managing Editor for Foreign News.

In 1986, he returned to the field as Associate Editor/Senior Foreign Correspondent, and began his twice-weekly column on global politics. It was syndicated in 1988.

Mr. Hoagland, who had interviewed Saddam Hussein and Kurdish rebel leader Mustafa Barzani, warned readers in 1988 and 1989 of Saddam's terror and regional ambition. Mr. Hoagland was critical of the lenient U.S. policy toward Saddam's Iraq and devoted six columns to the growing Iraqi threat in the months before the August 2, 1990, invasion of Kuwait.

"The writer most closely read at the White House, during this crisis," said The New York Review of Books, "was Jim Hoagland of The Washington Post. Such first-hand experience endowed his writing with special authority within the administration."

Goodwin Compares Past and Present Media Coverage Of Presidential Campaigns

by Emmanuel Wahiwe
Staff Writer

In the midst of the current Presidential campaign, Doris Kearns Goodwin came and shared with the CSC students some thoughts about the way the media tend to deal with the problem of sorting out various candidates. Her visit, organized by the Lyceum Committee, featured discussions of problems with the media coverage of the most recent campaign. She compared both present and past media coverage of presidential campaigns.

Dr. Goodwin, a former Harvard professor and the author of the New York Times' best-sellers Lyndon Johnson and the American Dream and The Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys began teaching courses on the Presidency and American history at Harvard in 1969. Her book on the Kennedys was developed into a mini-series on ABC, which aired in February of 1990. (See Media and Campaigns on page 7)

Martin Dawe Returns As A Lyceum Visiting Artist

During the week of April 13-17, Atlanta artist Martin Dawe makes a return appearance as a Lyceum Artist-in-Residence. He will be working with students in G-100, the art studio.

Mr. Dawe is a sculptor who works primarily in bronze, wood and clay. The emphasis of his work has been outdoor sculpture based upon architectural metaphors and built in figurative scale. He did undergraduate work at the University of Maine, at Boston University, and then received his B.F.A. from Georgia State University. Mr. Dawe served an eight-year apprenticeship under Julian H. Harris, during which time he completed many bronze portrait plaques and medallions.

Mr. Dawe has had numerous commissions from both private and commercial sources. Among his commissions are carved figures for the stage set of Madonna's "Blond Ambition" tour, larger-than-life size figures for a national Honda commercial, and the Naismith Trophy, presented annually to the nation's top collegiate basketball players. He has taught figurative clay sculpture at the North Arts Center in Atlanta, and has previously participated in several residencies at Clayton State. In addition to his residency, Mr. Dawe will be exhibiting his artwork on campus throughout the month.

Martin Dawe has served as a Lyceum artist-in-residence several times in the past.

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

Sample Questions For "Business In Review '92"

So you've decided to attend "Business In Review '92" on April 23. Now what? Which questions will you ask the company representatives? How can you inquire about career opportunities related to your major? Or, if you haven't decided upon a major but have several ideas in mind, how may you find out which careers offer the best opportunities for you?

The following represents sample questions which could be useful in talking with representatives at "Business In Review '92".

1) Does your company (or agency) employ _____ (particular career, i.e., accountants, auditors)?

2) I am interested in getting into the field of _____ (name of career field) and am inquiring as to which qualifications your firm considers in hiring applicants in that field.

3) Do you anticipate much demand in your organization for people in _____ (name of career field) in _____ (number of years)?

4) What is the range of salaries offered in entry level positions in the _____ (name of career field) in your company?

5) Does your organization ever hire students in co-op positions or internships in the area of _____ (what major or career field)? If so, how do I go about applying for these programs with your firm? What other experience, courses, grades, or other training would help me become more competitive for these special programs?

6) Do you have positions for which a liberal arts degree would be beneficial?

7) In your opinion, what makes one qualified applicant stand out from other applicants?

8) What are your companies' most sought-after skills?

9) Which geographic areas do you anticipate future openings with your firm?

10) Does your company offer training and development programs, or educational options?

Business representatives attending the event will also be available to provide information about cooperative education or internship programs available with their firm. Students anticipating a co-op or internship placement in future quarters should take advantage of the opportunity of exploring these beneficial programs with the represented businesses and agencies.

The representatives participating in "Business In Review '92" will be arranged in alphabetical order in the campus gymnasium. Students will register upon entering the gym, and a list of program participants will be made available. Peggy A. Gardner, Director of Placement at CSC, suggests that students research the companies in which they are interested prior to the event. Currently enrolled students will receive an announcement in early April reminding them of the program, and providing a listing of the companies attending.

In this way, students will know beforehand with whom they wish to talk, and should plan to utilize this time effectively, as this is a once-a-year event only. The Placement Office in D-208 can provide resources and information about the organizations planning to attend. Also, students are advised to check periodicals in the library, such as the Atlanta Business Chronicle, for information about the companies.

Students will want to "dress for success" by wearing conservative attire. Also, students will want to prepare a few questions to discuss with company representatives (see "Sample questions" article prepared by the Job Placement Director). To gain the most from the event, students should prepare to ask questions and bring a small notebook to make note of important facts and contact names from the companies represented. Students don't necessarily need to bring a resume, but for those close to graduation or contemplating an internship in the near future, it would be wise to have several copies on hand. It is the responsibility of each student to follow up on contacts made at the event. Interviews can be arranged at a later date through the Placement Office, as many of the represented companies return to campus during the year.

"Business In Review '92" is offered as a networking program for students. It provides practice in effective communication with employers, and provides important interaction with representatives on a one-on-one as well as small group basis. It also provides an excellent opportunity to see the wide range of jobs offered in the regional community, or with companies which have locations throughout the United States.

Students may be eligible to receive credit in some classes for attending the event. Registration sheets will be available, listed by School. It is the responsibility of each student to register upon arrival at the program.

For additional information, students should call 961-3518.

Preston Harden (l), a marketing and management major, was the first student to take advantage of the new kiNexus computerized database system. Joan Leopard (r), a secretary in the Office of Job Placement and Cooperative Education, explained the new free service to Mr. Harden.

Career Center Offers Two New Placement Referral Programs For Graduates

The Career Center and Job Placement Office, located in D-208, has implemented two new and unique programs for students preparing to enter the world of work. Both of these services offer students greater access to more employment opportunities than ever before.

One new program - kiNexus- is a computerized database program recently installed in the Job Placement Office. This program is designed to provide students with the opportunity to register with kiNexus' national database, allowing CSC students to connect with the right company and the right job. Students interested in utilizing the kiNexus service should stop by the Career Center and register to use the service. Once registered, students may complete a worksheet of information requested by national employers, then enter the information on computer disk by a predetermined program. The information is then forwarded by the Job Placement Office on to the kiNexus Data Registration Center, where it is then made available by major, occupational or career interest, and other factors to employers subscribing to the kiNexus service. Students may utilize the computer available in the Job Placement Center, or, if more convenient, enter data for kiNexus on any of the more than 60 computers available in the computer labs. The information disks are then downloaded for the students by the Job Placement staff.

Another new program now available for students is Peterson's Connexion. Students are invited to register with the Connexion service through the Job Placement Office. When students register, they are joining a network regularly accessed by employers and graduate schools who have jobs or educational opportunities to offer. Once students have completed the registration application, the file is forwarded to the Connexion database for evaluation. When a student's data file matches the requirements of corporate or academic searchers, the student profile is forwarded to that company or agency. They will evaluate a student's data file in terms of their specific needs, and will contact the student directly to pursue their interest.

"We highly recommend both of these new programs to our students, whether they are first-year or graduating seniors" says Ms. Peggy Gardner, Director of Job Placement. "Current economic conditions directly impact the employment sector, and students need to use every resource available in order to effectively compete." Both the new student database programs access hundreds of employers regionally and nationally and are equally effective in seeking summer employment, internships or cooperative education programs.

"And the best part of all", according to Ms. Gardner, "is the services are free to all students." For additional information, or to register with either of these services, students should come by D-208.

Governor's Intern Program Representative At CSC Next Week

The program representative for the Governor's Intern Program will visit campus Thursday April 9, 1992. She will be interviewing interested students for prospective placements in the Summer Intern Program.

The Governor's Intern Program offers invaluable work experience for a 10-week period in a governmental or non-profit agency. The intern serves as a staff member with professionals in a career of interest to the student. A great deal of emphasis is placed on merging classroom learning with practical application. College juniors & seniors in any academic discipline are encouraged to participate a limited number of placements may be available at the associate-degree level. Internships are available throughout the State of Georgia.

The Governor's Intern Program creates a mutually beneficial arrangement for college students, their respective schools, and participating agencies. Consequently, the selection process is critical to ensure that the students' skills are developed and their goals are achieved. Selection of interns is based on interests, area of expertise, maturity, academic record, and the availability of internships.

Each applicant must complete an application and interview with a member of the Intern Staff. After the preliminary interview, prospective interns visit agencies that could utilize their talents. This process is very effective in determining the best placement and provides an excellent opportunity for college students to improve their interviewing skills.

An internship is the "lab" work of major courses and is considered a vital step in a successful academic program. Although not every degree requires an internship, all students are encouraged to participate. It is the student's responsibility to obtain academic credit within the school's guidelines.

In addition to "hands on" training and course credit, all Governor's Interns receive an educational stipend.

For additional program information and to schedule an interview students should apply in D-208 - Job Placement and Co-op by April 7, 1992.

African American Philharmonic Orchestra Concert Set For April 16 In Spivey Hall

Members of the African American Philharmonic Orchestra will present a concert at 12:05 on Thursday, April 16, 1992. This performance will take place in Spivey Hall. The concert is part of the Lyceum series on "Multi-Cultural Education" and was proposed by the Black Cultural Awareness Association. No tickets are needed for this concert.

The Orchestra was founded in 1988 by the Music South Corporation. The primary concern of this group is to foster an appreciation of jazz and classical music and to expose the community-at-large to the breadth of works of African-American composers. Each member is auditioned and carefully selected to build an orchestra which exhibits a complete range of artistry in the featured contemporary, classical, jazz and gospel works.

Mr. John T. Peek, the Orchestra's conductor, is a noted trumpeter. He has played with such greats as Ray Charles and B.B. King. In addition to conducting the Orchestra, he is the President of Music South Corporation and serves as the Director of the Instruments of Praise Orchestra at Cascade United Methodist Church in Atlanta.

This February the Orchestra and the Morris Brown College Concert Choir presented the Third Annual Tribute to Black History Month program at the Atlanta Civic Center.

According to Dr. Goodwin, "50 years ago most Americans identified strongly with one or the other party; their party identification was much a part of their neighborhood, their community, being a part of a church or a family. Parties were a source of entertainment, connecting people in social lives. And in those days, the party chose the leaders, chose the nominees for the conventions, and then eventually for the election."

But today, the media are largely responsible voters' choosing one candidate over another, which is all the more reason, she believes, "why we should resolve to figure out how to get the media to do a better job in covering our candidates and somehow to get beyond the misleading advertisements as a major reason why we understand a candidate."

Instead of placing more emphasis on the candidates' private lives, with undue references to their sexual behaviors, she feels that the essential part is to understand the character of the candidates - to recognize the way they handled people and staff in the past; to discover their fundamental attitudes towards life and politics; and to recognize how the candidates had responded to previous crises in their lives. The key challenge must always be to recognize the relationship of the past behavior to the candidates' leadership ability, which means first putting the story of the past into the context of the time to show what the person was actually doing at that time.

Dr. Goodwin, who also shared with the audience some of the dilemmas that she has undergone in writing her three biographies on Lyndon Johnson, the Kennedys, and the Roosevelts, finally advised the media to make sure their story-recording is true, not just a rumor as so often it is today, and to show how a particular incident in the past relates to the kind of President the candidate might be in the future.

The "Tradition Is Building" In Clayton State Basketball

by Lori Cohen
Staff Writer

Mr. Mason Barfield, head coach of the Clayton State Lakers comments, that "the 1991-92 season had room for improvements." The team was not overly satisfied with the season but was much improved over the inaugural season last year. The changes that have occurred since last season strengthened the team for this year's opponents. The team record this year exceeded last year's record by 300%, which suggests the hard work that these athletes have put forth.

All of the players from this year are returning for next year's season. Coach Barfield says, "I'm adding two players for next year's roster, a post men and a perimeter player, that can shoot the three." Another area Barfield says needs improvement is the free throw shots. The team made 339 of 549 of its free throws and the coach feels, "with hard work and determination this team could make the most of our free throws next year."

Next season the team roster includes three seniors which the coach is pleased about because of the needed "player leadership." This team has the potential to be a great basketball team next season but every player Coach Barfield says, "has to make the commitment to get better." "Men's basketball is in its building stage at Clayton, as we improve each year our confidence and the tradition is building," adds Coach Barfield.

CSC Adds Another Intercollegiate Sport

by Lori Cohen
Staff Writer

At a press conference on March 5, Mr. Mason Barfield, Director of Athletics, officially announced that men's intercollegiate soccer is coming to Clayton State College. Barfield and the College are please with this addition because, "soccer is very much in demand in this area." The talent in the area focused on this sport is in abundance and is a natural sport for our College.

The announcement of Adrian Brooks becoming the coach for our new team came as no surprise to anyone in attendance that day. He is a former collegiate All-American and professional player and coach and is a welcome addition to our coaching staff. Brooks also played for the Atlanta Chiefs for two seasons and had the same in Baltimore for the Blast. Brooks was a three-time NCAA Division I All American at Philadelphia College of Textiles & Sciences, and was named College Soccer Player of the Year in 1978. Along with the introduction of Brooks as head coach, Barfield announced that Jose Rivera, who coached the Soccer Club last fall, will be the team's assistant coach.

Four players already have been signed to play in the fall: Craig Marshall, Matt Key, Tommy Lockart, and Matthew Gibson. These four young men are believed to be in top condition and are great assets to our College team. The talent of coaches, Adrian Brooks, and Jose Rivera, combined with the first four new members, should mean the potential for a winning season. Please see the tentative soccer schedule on the right.
