CSC Student Body Is Diverse Group Of Individuals

by Kiki Steen
Staff Writer

With nearly five thousand students (4,540 to be exact), do you ever wonder, "Who the heck are these people?" The partial answer is below.

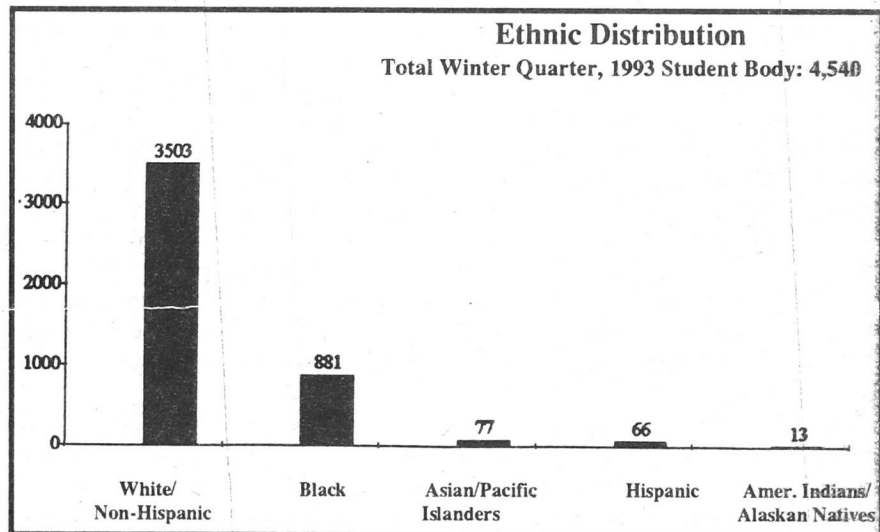

A breakdown of the total student body, by gender, shows that 61% of all students are female. However, the populations among the schools differ greatly. For instance, the School of Technology is only 26% female but the School of Health Sciences is 91% female.

The age of students varies greatly at CSC with student ages ranging from under 20 to a few students over 60. The average age is approximately 26.

Although 97% of the student body is from the U.S. and its territories, a wide range of countries, from Nigeria to Vietnam, are represented. Also, a great deal of diversity can be seen in the ethnic composition of the student body with all major ethnic groups represented, to some extent.

Nearly half (46.4%) of the student body live in Clayton County. Henry County residents make up 14.1% of the student body and Fayette county residents comprise 13.1%. The only other county with more than 10%, is Fulton with 11.3%.

The Cost Of Higher Education Goes Up This Summer Quarter

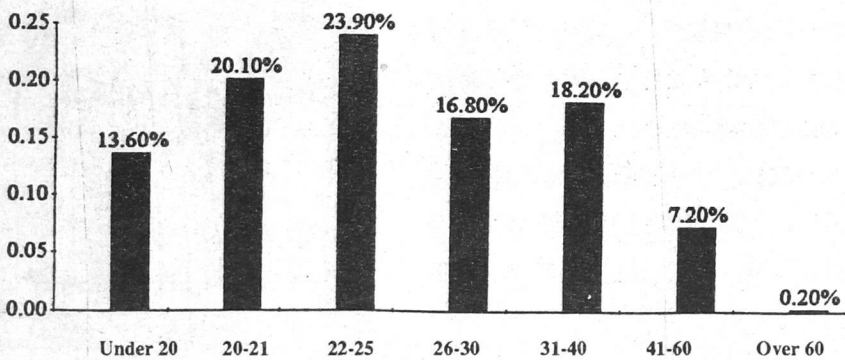

by Kelly McElfish
Staff Writer

Clayton State College started charging senior college fees in the fall of 1987. Since that time the matriculation fee has increased each year. This year the Board of Regents approved a 3% increase in the matriculation fee. In addition, increases in the Clayton State College student activities and athletic fees were also approved. Starting summer quarter, full-time students who are Georgia residents will pay $498.50, an increase of $18.50 from this past year. The breakdown of the increases are as follows; the matriculation fee is up $13, the activity fee is up $3, and the athletic fee has been raised by $2.

Students have mixed feelings about the increase. Tammy Brooks, a full-time employee and student at Clayton State College, is not pleased at all about the increases. "What really bothers me is the increase in the athletic and activities fees, I don't understand why I should have to pay for something I don't have time to attend." Ms. Brooks continued to say that she does support Clayton State College's (See Education Cost on page 3)

Do We Need Girls With Guns?

by Jeff Bradley
Staff Writer

Amy Stone, a 28-year old Air Force Captain with curly blond hair and a girlish grin, told me sternly, "I can and will kill to defend my country." And I believe her.

I believe that women are just as capable as men. I believe that they can do the same jobs and perform the same duties as men.

But that doesn't mean I want them in combat.

There are certain situations that I wouldn't want women. One of these is the front line of a war. So far, the only changes made have been to allow women access to more jets, tanks and other equipment. There have been no moves to allow women into submarines, amphibious assault craft or other areas where privacy becomes a dominant issue. And there is no pressure for women to jump into the foxholes alongside male grunts. The positions being sought by women are typically more intelligent jobs requiring technical skill. They want to fly fighter aircraft and use advanced artillery.

My problem comes when women, as a group, become more militaristic. Once women become competent in technical military positions, they would be a hot commodity if war were to break out. Women's capabilities to perform violent acts would become valuable. And our view of women as the gentle, nurturing gender would be threatened.

We are one step closer to tearing down our picture of a loving mother and replacing it with a poster of Rambina holding an M-60.

Elaine Donnelly, President of the Center for Military Readiness, accused the Clinton administration of preparing "...to order the nation's daughters into killing zones and rape motels which he himself avoided."

Creating a uni-sex environment and attempting to eliminate any difference in gender is not the key to gaining equality. The June Cleaver-era is dead and gone, but is America really ready for Annette Schwarzeneger?

Allowing women into the front lines would be a mistake. Putting women in combat situations doesn't damage our national defense. It damages our entire cultural structure.

extra-curricular activities, but would prefer some other system to be worked out. "I feel that if you are interested in going to these events, then these fees could be paid, but if you are not, then you would be able to save that additional $38 we are required to pay this next year," concluded Ms. Brooks.

Craig Elder, a full-time student, feels that the $18.50 increase is not a big deal. "When I transfer to Georgia State the tuition is going to be much higher than what the increase is going to be here. So I actually feel it's a bargain, in comparison," explained Mr. Elder.

As far as the public colleges and universities in Georgia go, Clayton State College has one of the lowest costs, according to Robert Taylor, Director of Student Activities. At twelve hours, Clayton State College stops at one flat fee, whereas at least one other institution charges for each individual hour taken. Mr. Taylor also stated that Clayton State College's activity and athletic fees are among the lowest in the University System of Georgia.

LYCEUM EVENTS

Dido And Aeneas Opens With A Preview On May 27

On May 27th and 28th, Clayton State Theater will present a production of the Clayton State College Department of Music, an historically staged performance of Henry Purcell's Dido and Aeneas.

In 1689, at a girl's boarding school, this first modern English opera was staged with little fanfare and no critical notices. A joint effort of Josiah Priest, the dancing master who ran the boarding school, Henry Purcell, the great English Baroque composer, and the poet Nathan Tate, Dido and Aeneas remains a unique jewel in the opera tradition.

The story of the ill-fated love affair between the powerful Queen Dido of Carthage, and the future founder of the city of Rome, the Trojan War hero Aeneas, was probably originally performed by students at the boarding school. Clayton State College music students will perform the opera on May 28th and 29th at 8:15 p.m. in Spivey Hall in a manner faithful to the original performance. As in the original, the fast-paced story is conveyed through a combination of solo songs, choruses, and dances, a feast for the eyes as well as the ears.

Under the direction of Dr. Lyle Nordstrom, new head of the CSC Department of Music, the production will also feature the choreography and stage direction of Ken Pierce, a Baroque dance specialist from Boston, the set and production design of Dr. Larry Corse, and the orchestral leadership of Ingrid Matthews, member of Tafelmusik, the Canadian Baroque orchestra.

Soloists in Dido and Aeneas will be Tami Petty of Mt. Clemens, Michigan, as Dido, Tony Kimbrell of Rex as Aeneas, Jolle Greenleaf of Oregon as Belinda, Allison Brown of Jonesboro as the messenger, Angel Starkey of Port Huron, Michigan, as the Attendant, Paula Streible of Marietta as the Sorceress, Gretchen Kelhoffer of Dunwoody and Wendy Baker of Marietta as the witches. The choruses and dances will be performed by the Clayton State College Camerata.

On the same program will also be a performance of Purcell's Welcome to All the Pleasures, the ode written for St. Cecilia's Day in 1683. Soloists in this work are Barney Trader of Rex, David Saffron from Lake Orion, Michigan, and Michael Satterfield of Jonesboro.

Admission is free, but tickets may be reserved in advance by calling the Spivey Hall Box Office, 961-3683.

May 27 Tschinkel Lecture Shifted To 11:00 AM

The May 27 lecture by Ms. Sheila Tschinkel has been shifted from 12:05 p.m. to 11:00 a.m. that day. In addition, the lecture has been moved from G-132 to D-221.

Ms. Tschinkel will be speaking on "The U.S. and Global Economic Change" during this final presentation in the Lyceum "Staying in Touch With the World" lecture series.

Ms. Tschinkel is Senior Vice President and Director of Research for the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. She has been with the Atlanta "Fed" since 1984. Prior to this she served as a Vice President at Chase Manhattan Bank where she managed the bank's domestic and foreign securities investment portfolio. She also served as Executive Vice President of MPH Commodities Corporation.

Ms. Tschinkel did her undergraduate work at Hunter College and her graduate work at Yale University. She has taught finance and economics at Yale and New York University. She is listed in Who's Who in America.

Cultural Diversity: A Struggle For Understanding

by Annise L. Barber
Staff Writer

On May 3-4, Mrs. Linda Chavez lectured on cultural diversity in education. Mrs. Chavez is a senior fellow at the Manhattan Institute for Policy Research and a regular political commentator on National Public Radio's Morning Edition. As the highest-ranking Hispanic in the Reagan administration, she served as Executive Director of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and the White House Director of Public Liaison. Mrs. Chavez was the Republican nominee for the U.S. Senate from Maryland in 1986 and before her government service, she was editor of the award winning magazine of the American Federation of Teachers, The Educator.

Mrs. Chavez feels that the attempts made in the recent years to integrate the elementary and secondary education were long overdue. According to Mrs. Chavez, American schools are depriving the children of multicultural diversity by centering only on what the children have already learned. A classic example of this centering is when Hispanic children in East Los Angeles are taught only in Spanish and are not encouraged to speak or write in English. This idea, which was created because of the lack of bilingual teachers, was not intended to center. Instead it was to expose the children to both languages. Since the Spanish-speaking teachers had little English-speaking skills, they taught what they felt most comfortable, with the result being centering. As Mrs. Chavez stated in her lecture "The more diverse we become racially and ethnically, the more important it is that we learn to tolerate differences. It is also important that we learn to celebrate what it is that we all have in common."

According to Mrs. Chavez, there are five simple steps that American educators should take when trying to deal with a diverse student population:

1) all children in American schools need to be taught to read, write, and speak standard English well.

2) all students need to learn basic math and science.

3) all students need a basic understanding of our particular form of government and its institutions.

4) we need to teach students a history of this nation with sensitivity to other ethnic groups.

5) all American students need a better understanding of the world in which we live.

Mrs. Chavez feels that by understanding and incorporating these ideals we will become "e pluribus un" or "out of many, one."

As Mrs. Chavez stated in her lecture "The face of America is in fact changing. We are no longer a white and black society struggling to integrate two groups who have been here for nearly four hundred years, but we are rather a multiracial and multiethnic society in which newcomers are literally arriving every day of the week."

Mel Gibson Returns To The G-132 Screen In Forever Young

by Meridith Barnhill
Staff Writer

General Entertainment will present Forever Young on May 21 at 1:40, 6:30, 8:30, and 10:30 p.m. in room G-132. There will not be a kiddie film shown because this feature is rated PG.

"There is something agreeable about Jeffrey Abrams' affable script, Steve Miners' gently romantic direction and Mel Gibson's easy-riding charm." This is how Richard Schickel and Richard Corliss of Time magazine felt about the sincere drama Forever Young. Mel Gibson stars as Daniel, a young man who, after the love of his life enters a coma, partakes in cryogenics (freezing the body). The experiment began in 1939 and was only supposed to last a year. But as every movie must have it, there is a twist of fate. Daniel was not "thawed" out until 1992.

As Daniel tries to adjust to life in the 90's he befriends Nat (Elijah Wood), a mischievous 10 year old and Nat's mother Claire (Jamie Lee Curtis). As they try to teach Daniel about how life has changed, the U.S. Government has discovered the experiment. The resemblance to E.T. is evident as Nat and Claire help to protect Daniel from the U.S. Government.

Brian Lowry of Variety magazine states that this movie "...takes some clever and extremely satisfying turns." Although this movie received good and bad reviews, it was a breath of fresh air amid movies released last Christmas.

Mike Hanie Named Lakers' Head Soccer Coach For 1993-94 Season

Mike Hanie, an assistant coach last season on Clayton State College's inaugural soccer team, has been named head coach of the Lakers, according to Mason Barfield, Director of Athletics.

Hanie replaces Adrian Brooks who resigned recently to accept a position with the Adidas Shoe Company.

A 1977 graduate of Forest Park High School, Hanie served as goalkeeper coach for the Lakers in their first season. CSC ended up second in NAIA District 25 behind Hanie's alma mater, Berry College.

"After being an assistant last year, I know the strengths of the players coming back," said Hanie. "Our biggest challenge will be to duplicate last season's accomplishments. Adrian did such a great job in the first season, it's going to be a tough act to follow."

Hanie has over 19 years of playing and coaching experience. He has coached soccer at all levels and recently completed his first season as girls soccer coach at Griffin High School. Hanie also had high school coaching stints at Lovejoy and Hibriten in North Carolina. He has additional college coaching experience serving as a graduate assistant at Georgia Southern and as head coach for one season at Pfeiffer College (N.C.).

Hanie is a United States Soccer Federation (USSF) National A-licensed coach, a member and staff coach for the Georgia State Select Program and a member of the coaching staff of the Lightening Soccer Club in Fayetteville.

The Jonesboro resident is married and he and his wife Eve have two children, Brittany and Keegan. Hanie holds a Bachelor of Science in Physical Education from Berry and a Master's in Education from Georgia Southern.

"We're glad to have Mike on board," said Barfield. "He did a fine job last year working with Adrian. We're glad he showed an interest and is familiar not only with our program, but with soccer in the area. He's also familiar with soccer in our conference since he played in the GIAC (Georgia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference)."

Brooks, a former collegiate and professional player, guided the first-year CSC squad to an 11-5-1 record. The three-time NCAA Division I All-American played for several professional teams, including the Atlanta Chiefs and Attack.
